

To Whom It May Concern:

Upon entering my first semester of living on campus there was a lot of uncertainty, concerning my future. I was entering a new environment, distant from home. During this time there was a great deal of things running through my mind. Such as how different would it be living without my parents or siblings? How was I going to deal with these new responsibilities? How was I going to get along with my roommate?

Kevin Haro's friendly nature combined with his desire to help anyone who needs it makes him an ideal RA. He has helped me on countless occasions. As this was my first year living on campus as well, as Piedmont Central being a freshmen dorm, I did not know many people. Kevin, being the person he is, introduced me with many people with similar interests as me. I distinctly remember on one occasion when we attend an anime event together. I am a huge fan of anime. Whist there he introduced me to people who enjoyed watching the same anime as I did. He also introduced me to people who I hang out till this day. He seemed to be friends with everyone.

On another instance, during the finals last semester, I had a difficult time studying. I usually like too study in the library however as it was finals week all the study rooms were taken. With no other alternative I had no choice but to study in my room. However, I couldn't study because it was too comfortable to focus. I shared my problem with Kevin and as usual he came through. He was more than happy to show me some of his favorite study areas in Piedmont Central. He showed me a room in the 8th floor rarely used by anyone. It was a quite and secluded area away from the crowd. Now I am not saying that I passed my finals because of him but his secret study room surely helped.

Furthermore, as his roommate I am aware of the countless residents that have come to Kevin for advice on many occasions. As far as I am aware he has yet to fail to help anyone. More over I have yet to encounter a resident who disliked him or did not respect him. Kevin is a natural born leader with a friendly and helpful nature which makes him an ideal RA.

Sincerely,

Abdullah Asaad